The Montisnávia building was designed thinking of those who promote well-being without causing discomfort around them. Considered as one of the coolest areas of the city, Alcântara is famous for its good restaurants, thriving nightlife and the pleasant strolls by the river, in the Docks. More recently, it was seen an old industrial area give place to LX Factory, a creative hub featuring a range of offices, shops, restaurants and cafés. With the renovation of the Tapada da Ajuda after the 1755 earthquake, the city grew in this direction and the Alcântara area, in particular the hillside on Maria Pia Street, started to be occupied by certain industries, of which stands out the dyeing facilities of the Royal Silk Factory. The Montisnávia buildings is born of the union and restoration of a house and a old factory. Following the recuperation of the facade, which made it possible to keep the historical image of this neighbourhood, came a conceptual contemporaneity, which established a dialectic between the past and the present.

The terraces tear the surface of the roof, allowing for generous views over Monsanto, the 25 de Abril Bridge and in part over the river. 1 to 4 bedroom apartments, all with private terrace or garden, storage room and 1 or 2 parking spaces, depending on the apartment.
